Initial Public Warning Release Date: July 28, 2014
Updated: August 28, 2014

At Intertek, we believe disclosure and transparency are the foundational pillars of providing not only quality solutions to our customers but also the latest findings and developments on product safety to the end consumer. On July 28, 2014, Intertek posted a Public Notice regarding the use of a counterfeit certification mark on a particular ceramic oscillating heater manufactured by GD Midea. At the time the Notice was issued, the information provided, or lack thereof, left us in a position to support such a statement. We now have received further information and determined a correction is warranted.
